So much happens - not just breakdowns, bad luck and mishaps, but also accidents beyond our control and deliberate criminal offences. And when something bad happens, you get to know people. Hardly anyone is prepared to accept the damage they have suffered as a fateful misfortune. They always look for someone to blame and claim compensation. The resulting civil proceedings often reveal more clearly than criminal investigations what people's hearts are set on, but also the outrageous greed within which they use every opportunity to lie their pockets in court.

Tort law is therefore more appropriate than any other area of law for hopping from case to case. Our esteemed guest Professor Dr. Peter A. Windel invites you to join him for this. The audience awaits a tragicomic kaleidoscope of case law.
