The Moot is a competition with an exclusive focus on cross-examination techniques in international arbitration. The teams will attend various rounds of hearings during which they will cross-examine each other's witnesses and experts. The 2021 case concerns a dispute over the construction of a renewable energy plant, involving issues like delays in the construction, scope of the works, and production of the plant, as well as damages discussions related to the calculation of penalties, price adjustment, and discounted cash flow. Students will have to cross-examine the commercial managers that negotiated the contract, the chiefs of operations that supervised and oversaw the works, and experts on damages.
