Mediation Theory and Skills

15 July - 19 July, 2019

Course Director:

Sharon B. Press, Mitchell Hamline School of Law, St. Paul, USA

Course Faculty:

Borbala Fellegi, Foresee Research Group Nonprofit Ltd., Budapest, Hungary; Kinga Goncz, Former Minister of Foreign Affairs of Hungary; Christian Hartwig, Streitvermittler, Berlin, Germany; Markus Petsche, Department of Legal Studies, Central European University, Budapest, Hungary

This intensive one-week course facilitates the exchange of ideas and cooperative projects among mediation scholars, practitioners, trainers, and students in the East and West. In addition to offering an introduction to mediation, the program provides a teaching and training template for mediation training for scholars and practitioners from around the world to adapt for use in their home countries.

Through lecture, discussion, demonstration and role-plays, students will be introduced to mediation theory and skills and examine the impact of culture and context on the consensus-building approach adopted. The interactive presentation of the material is designed to showcase teaching and training models to those course participants who want to develop programs in their own countries. Participants should come prepared for a highly engaging learning experience. Applicants who have the means and ability to teach and train in transition countries will be given preference for acceptance.

Case examples will focus on both civil and criminal mediation models and scenarios from both the United States and Central and Eastern Europe, including efforts to promote dialogue in times of crisis involving high-conflict situations and inter-ethnic tensions.

Mediation is an emerging field in both the west and the east. Legislation mandating the use of mediation has outpaced the development of both theory and practice, and this course is designed in part to fill that gap, cultivating scholars, teachers, trainers, and practitioners in this developing and important arena.

Constitution-building in Africa

1 July – 12 July, 2019

In cooperation with International IDEA, Friedrich Ebert Stiftung and Centre for Global Cooperation Research

Course Directors:

Markus Böckenförde, Department of Legal Studies, Central European University, Budapest, Hungary; Gedion Hessebon, School of Law, Addis Ababa University, Ethiopia

Course Faculty:

Horace S Adjolahun, African Court on Human and Peoples' Rights, Arusha, Tanzania; Jill Cottrell (via skype, tbc), Katiba Institut, Nairobi, Kenya; Yash Ghai (via skype, tbc), University of Hong Kong, Professor emeritus; Omar Hammady, Advisor to the Office of the Special Envoy of the SG for Syria / UN Department of Political Affairs (UNDPA); Babacar Kanté, University Gaston Berger, St. Louis, Senegal, former Vice President of the Constitutional Council, Senegal; Christina Murray, University of Cape Town, South Africa; Senior Adviser on Constitutions and Process Design, UNDPA; Kwasi Prempeh, Executive Director, Ghana Center for Democratic Development, Accra, Ghana

The two-week research course intends to tackle complex societal, political and legal problems in constitution-building from an interdisciplinary perspective, informed by field experience. We seek to combine different disciplines (mostly comparative law and political science) and perspectives (comparative governmental systems; electoral systems; decentralization; human rights; comparative constitutional law; good governance; etc.) to offer new insights on a classic subject of the highest academic and practical relevance.

The course is designed to be a forum for exchange and mutual learning for young scholars and practitioners from the civil sector, from public administration, from regional and international institutions.
